

MGS Strategic Learning Forum

Increasing collaboration to improve learning provision in the Scottish heritage sector

The MGS Strategic Learning Forum is a platform for museum and gallery learning practitioners to work collaboratively to improve learning provision in the Scottish heritage sector. The forum events are a valuable contact point between strategic-level education, learning policy areas and museum professionals engaged in learning roles.

The ultimate goal is to ensure effective engagement with museums and participation in learning programmes by children and young people.

The area of focus for the group is formal and informal learning. Meetings happen three times a year in various locations throughout Scotland

Aims:

- Encourage peer to peer support through knowledge exchange, sharing ideas and best practice and opportunities for working
- Identify and discuss issues around museum learning provision, identify solutions and explore opportunities for improvements
- Advocate and raise the profile of museum and gallery learning provision

Remit:

- Explore opportunities for museum and gallery learning practitioners to work collaboratively across and beyond the heritage sector
- Learn from what works and gather evidence to demonstrate impact
- Set the agenda and identify priority areas of work for the forum in collaboration with Museums Galleries Scotland

Membership: free and open to all museum and gallery learning staff, volunteers and freelancers
